Did you know that there is an eco-group for the year 4's, 5's and 6's? Well, they are working towards making our school as plastic free as possible, so one of the ways that we can do that is by banning glitter and loom bands. All that glitter is made of is coloured microbes of plastic. Piles and piles of plastic, everywhere. Most of you probably don't even realise that loom bands are bad for the environment, but they are. Poor harmless animals are swallowing and getting trapped in them. Hedgehogs, endangered animals, are getting killed and harmed for no reason other loom bands.

What can you do to help these defenceless animals? For starters, you can use less of these harmful tiny bands. Thank you for reading this article. Because by you reducing the usage of loom bands, you can save not only nature but the planet.

EPIC FAILS AT SCHOOL

A "mystery" Y4 student was on the climbing frame when she had the "great" idea of tying her dress to one of the poles on the climbing frame and pretending to fall backwards just like Michael Jackson. As the pupil pretended to slide the whistle went. The student tried to get out only to get in a bigger mess. One of her friends got help from a teacher and asked if they could assist. The teacher said he couldn't help because he couldn't climb up there but something that he could do was ask someone else. He asked a year 6 to help. As soon as the student got free she started chasing her two friends. Luckily, they weren't late for class. What an EPIC FAIL!

Did you know?

DO YOU THINK THESE COLOURFUL SQUIRREL'S ARE REAL OR JUST FAKE NEWS?!

REAL! They are called giant Indian malabar squirrels. Their bodies measure 36in from head to tail - double the size of their grey relatives - and they can leap 20ft between trees.

SCIENTISTS HAVE FOUND MICRO PLASTICS IN THE PYRENEES

The Pyrenees, in France, are mountains where scientists have found micro plastics. This is surprising because they are miles away from human civilisation. Micro plastics are pieces of plastic that are 5.0mm or smaller. They are the worst type of plastic because they go into the ocean and sea life eats it by accident. It is also shocking because they have found the wind can take micro plastics an incredible 60 miles away from where they were left or dropped. Micro plastics can be pieces of plastic that have mostly broken down or things like glitter. The good thing for us all to do would be to start buying recyclable plastic and other things you can recycle. In addition everyone needs to take more responsibility for not dropping litter.
